6. HOW TO READ THIS STATEMENT

6.1 How payments are applied. Every payment is applied first to legal costs and collection charges, then to the service fee, then to interest and default interest, and only what is left over reduces the principal. This is the order agreed in the loan agreement.

Worked example: a client owes N$2,000.00 principal, N$500.00 interest and a N$100.00 service fee, a total of N$2,600.00. The client pays N$1,000.00. We apply N$100.00 to the service fee, N$500.00 to interest, and the remaining N$400.00 to principal. The principal drops from N$2,000.00 to N$1,600.00 and the total still owing is N$1,600.00.

6.2 Interest is charged once for the loan term. The interest and service fee shown on a loan are a once-off charge for that loan, worked out on the principal. They are not charged again each month while the loan runs.

6.3 Default interest. If a loan is not paid on its due date, default interest may be charged on the amount in default. By law this is capped: it may not exceed the maximum rate set for microlenders, and it may only be charged for a limited period. QuickServe applies a maximum of 5% on the amount in default, for no longer than three months, after which no further default interest is added.

6.4 The balance cannot run away — the in duplum rule. Interest and other finance charges stop adding up once the unpaid interest and charges equal the capital still owing. In plain words: what is owed in interest and charges can never grow larger than the capital still owing. This applies to this account.

- 6.5 Extensions. A due date is only moved if QuickServe and the client sign a written extension agreement recording the new due date and any further amount payable. An extension is never made by phone, by WhatsApp message, or by an entry in our system alone. Any further charge on an extension, together with the original finance charges, remains subject to the legal maximum for the loan and to the in duplum rule in clause 6.4.
- 6.6 Written-off amounts. A write-off is an accounting step inside QuickServe's own books, recording that we no longer expect to recover an amount. It is not the same as cancelling the debt, and it does not remove the record from a credit bureau. If QuickServe has agreed to cancel or waive a balance, we say so in writing and issue a letter confirming it. Where a balance on this statement has been waived, it is described as "waived — no longer claimable" and not as "written off".
- 6.7 Paying early. The client may pay extra or settle any open loan early, at any time. There is no penalty, and finance charges are then only charged for the days the loan was actually used. Ask us for a free Early Settlement Quotation.
- 6.8 When a loan is settled. When a loan is settled in full we cancel any debit order, issue a free Paid-Up Letter, and submit the paid-up status to the credit bureau or bureaux we report to.
